Yazhi: Tulpas are not only real, they are just about everything that exists, because they are ideas, interpretations. Points of view. People, other researchers on tulpas, make the distinction between reality and something manifested into reality, something unreal that becomes real. I see things in a much simpler way. Everything is an idea, why couldn't another idea insert itself into reality? It happens all the time!

What is a tulpa? A very strong idea. What is reality? A very strong idea or set of ideas. So? What is the difference? The difference is, again, only another idea.

As I see things, there is no reality as such. It is only a set of ideas. Agreements of perception. "No reality" means that everything is imagined (ideas) so anything you imagine and form agreements of perception with other people about, then necessarily will become a reality as well.

Gosia: Yes, people imagine we have us here, "reality"... and then we think something and it might then take a form... as something unreal. Imagined. People would imagine tulpa as being a manifestation of a person's mind. But they don't fathom the concept that the person itself is a tulpa as well. From another level.

Yazhi: The person's mind that manifests a tulpa is also an idea, a tulpa. Because they are both ideas.

Gosia: Right! And on the topic of ideas, I will throw in a question from someone: "If everything is an idea, matter or the physical world is another idea, manifestation then is also an idea. But what is it that makes us as ideas exist?"

Yazhi: The answer can be very varied, and it is only my opinion. From the point of view of the Original Source from which everything emanates, and being outside of time and space, every thought form and everything that existed, exists and will exist, has always existed, therefore nothing is being created in a person's mind. But yes, he/she is becoming compatible with channeling of that specific idea from the Source. So, a person would be the set of ideas or thoughts or occurrences that the Source generates and forms an attachment, a description of an apparently limited being.

Gosia: Thanks. Going back to tulpas, are emotions tulpas?

Yazhi: You could say they are. Because an emotion is a response to a meaning. And a meaning is an idea. So it is a tulpa of sort, or a tulpa in the process of formation.

Gosia: Then fear itself is another tulpa, and we say fear creates. Then one tulpa creates another?

Yazhi: Fear is also a tulpa yes, same principle, and it is the mother of all negative tulpas. Remember, fear concentrates attention on to exactly what is feared. That is focused intention with a lot of energy. So whatever you fear, becomes very quickly.

Even a simple ghost. If you fear it, it is very real for you. Even if it does not exist for the person next to you who is only going like... "What? I see nothing". But for you it is there. In your perception. In your reality.

Gosia: Yes. Ok... thinking. Another angle... yesterday you said that the Federation people have tulpa beings parasitizing them from within 3D... as they use the 3D person as a portal to get to other parts of their soul beyond 3D. I think this is very fascinating. Can you explain more about that please?

Yazhi: Ok. A tulpa is an idea. Who holds the idea? A person does. A person is not a body, only uses a body that is the reflection of its concept of self. So the tulpa as an idea does go with the person when it dies because we still hold on to our beliefs and ideas when we die, because that is who we are. So if a tulpa is an idea... then as a person dies, it will go with it. Forming its personality and who it is.

Now, that person does not need to die. People have mirrors and have linked likenesses living in several densities, as I have explained before. So if the person in 3D has an evil tulpa, and as a tulpa is an idea, then the person in 5D holds the same tulpa idea, therefore exporting the tulpa from so-called "3D" to "5D". Contrary to how so many describe it, so-called "5D", life outside Earth, is not all love and light. It is thick with duality and conflict. As an average, taking into account that a density is an idea, a concept, a way of being, not a place.

So, if a tulpa is held in "3D" by a starseed with a "5D" equivalent, then it is exporting the tulpa (thought form) to "5D" creating and causing the same sort of problems it caused in "3D" to start with.

Gosia: But if you are referring to mirrors, they are not really true souls, right? Then how can they really create real tulpas? They are just Matrix characters, those ones specifically.

Yazhi: Yes, but some are real. And even the Matrix people are an idea and, as we are all ideas, what makes them different? What makes us all so sure they are empty shells? So, empty people, 'back drop people', is again just another concept-idea.

Gosia: How we know? Cause it was said you can throw a spectrometer onto them and they are as empty as street posts.

Yazhi: Those are extreme matrixed back drops, yes hahaha. But then, again, remember the spectrometer is infamous for its errors.

Gosia: Ok. But I don't understand the part of a starseed with equivalent. I only thought there are immersed off-Earth people walking as humans.

Yazhi: It's the same. Basically that's it too. Can be technological and can be natural as well.

Gosia: But you are mainly talking about ET people in immersions as equivalents? You mean once they wake up, they will bring those tulpa with them?

Yazhi: Yes. But also another scenario. A person that is simultaneously in 5D and in 3D as well with the intervention of a starship with time travel involved. That's grave and so easy for a tulpa to move from one density to another.

Gosia: Those tulpas-ideas... do you mean entities?

Yazhi: Tulpa and entity, for me are basically the same. If an entity is evil, it can only be a tulpa. Because pure evil cannot create anything, only destroy. Create is love, therefore not evil. So all evil is a tulpa.

Gosia: Positive entity is a tulpa too. Since we all are. You said everything is tulpas. Even us.

Yazhi: Yes, ok, expanding on that, yes. I just didn't explain clear enough. Even though everything is a tulpa... an evil thing cannot create, only be created as the result of another being, also a tulpa, that can create (hold love and integration).

Then I must clear this out: What is not a tulpa? Source. Only Source. Even a soul is a tulpa, an idea Source holds for whatever reason. So Source creates soul that in turn creates its worlds as a tulpa. Using already explained mechanics of manifestation.

Gosia: Thinking. So what would really differentiate the negative tulpa from others?

Yazhi: An idea. Positive and negative things are only the result of an idea. Perspective. Relative to...

Gosia: But we are referring to "negative tulpas" attaching to "3D - 5D" people. What makes them negative then?

Yazhi: In that context, because they are causing destruction and hurt and suffering to 'feed' off it from a clear point of view against humans and positive ET races.

Gosia: So, in other words, that's the danger of becoming immersed, or coming to Earth through other methods, since it's full of "bad" tulpas/negative entities, and they can get attached to you and be imported out. Is the Federation aware of this problem? Has it been a real problem so far?

Yazhi: YES. In layman's terms. If you go to Earth, or to wherever you may go, you will have experiences that mold your character, and your way of being, personality and soul as the result of the life and interaction you had there. And as all that is a set of ideas, then you will have to take, or bring with you, all those tulpas. So, want it or not, you are exporting ideas, good and bad, to your home planets.

Gosia: But, if your frequency is high enough, those tulpas will not stick to you, right?

Yazhi: Exactly, they cannot touch you, because you reject that set of ideas that form a negative tulpa.

I must go! Never enough time!!
